Idea: Elections as non-violent tool to transfer political power

2024: The Ultimate Election Year Around the World

National elections are scheduled or expected in at least 64 countries, as well as the European Union, which all together represent almost half the global population.

Puzzle

Why does election violence persist?

Competing explanations for post-election violence

We zoom in on the role of candidates from excluded, radical parties:

- ▶ Elections do not always produce clear-cut winners
- ▶ Radical parties are often excluded from government
- ▶ Elections create winners and losers within excluded parties among their candidates

Competing explanations for post-election violence

Who among winning/losing candidates is most likely to perpetrate post-election violence?

Competing explanations for post-election violence

Who among winning/losing candidates is most likely to perpetrate post-election violence?

Non-elected candidates

- ▶ Frustration over losing
- ▶ Seek to reverse election outcomes

Competing explanations for post-election violence

Who among winning/losing candidates is most likely to perpetrate post-election violence?

Non-elected candidates

- ▶ Frustration over losing
- ▶ Seek to reverse election outcomes

Elected candidates

- ▶ Frustration over winning seat, but failing to gain political influence
- ▶ Capacity to mobilize personnel

Study context: the Weimar Republic

- ▶ Politics divided between “Weimar parties” and extremist parties
- ▶ Violence organized by political parties through paramilitaries (peak in 1932)
- ▶ SA was the paramilitary wing of the Nazi party, with 250,000 members in 1932
- ▶ Elections in July 1932 saw the Nazi vote share double to 37.3%
 - ▶ 230 NSDAP mandates (843 candidates)
 - ▶ No political perspective: Reich president Hindenburg rejected Hitler's demand to be appointed chancellor
 - ▶ New elections in November 1932

● Violent events

Comparing violence in home towns of elected vs. non-elected Nazi candidates in an RDD

Example: NSDAP's candidate list of the "Düsseldorf-Ost" electoral district for the 1932 July elections

Candidate	Rank	Relative Rank	Status	Home town
Friedrich Karl Florian	1	-5	Elected	Düsseldorf
Willi Veller	2	-4	Elected	Wuppertal
Wilhelm Boerger	3	-3	Elected	Neuss
Theodor Oppermann	4	-2	Elected	Düsseldorf
Josef Klein	5	-1	Elected	Düsseldorf
Werner Scheibner	6	0	Elected	Wuppertal
Hermann Schroer	7	1	Non-elected	Wuppertal-Elberfeld
Rudolf Heukenkamp	8	2	Non-elected	Remmscheid-Lennep
Jürgen von dem Knesebeck	9	3	Non-elected	Ratzeburg
Wilhelm Pelzer	10	4	Non-elected	Neuss

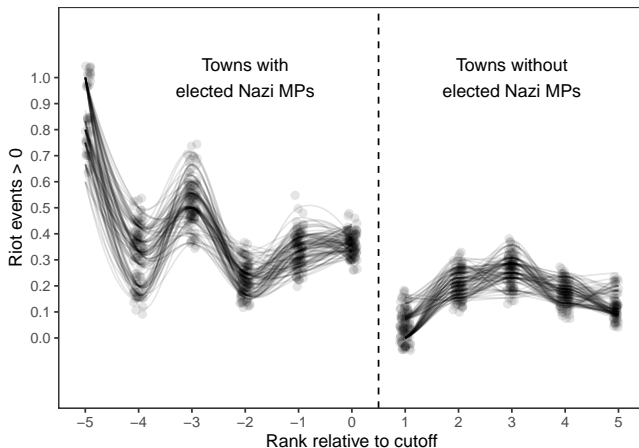

Unit of analysis: Hometowns of NSDAP candidates

Home towns of NSDAP candidate: ○ Not elected ▲ Elected MP

Main results: violence around cutoff

A: Violent events after election

Probing mechanisms

1. Violence predominantly perpetrated by SA targeting Communists, not vice versa
2. Motivation for violence: SA units with many elected candidates reported more frustration over lack of political perspective
3. Capacity for violence: SA units with many elected candidates attracted more members

Central findings

- ▶ Frustrated “elected losers” can fuel radical post-election violence
- ▶ Effects driven by motivational and organizational mechanisms

Implications & next steps

- ▶ Illustrates fundamental dilemma of dealing with radical parties: including them in government is dangerous for democracies, but excluding them can be dangerous (& violent), too!
- ▶ Next steps: Expand theory, probe scope conditions

Check of RDD identifying assumptions

A: Cutoff distance and MP representation

B: Covariate balance

Outcome is a dummy variable taking one if at least one violent event between SA and KPD forces occurred in a town. Coefficients for relative rank and relative rank \times above cutoff are estimated, but omitted from the table. Robust standard errors clustered by county reported in parentheses.
